4TH SUNDAY OF ADVENT

Excerpt from a homily by Fr. Carl Kelly, OMI

We have come to the 4th Sunday of Advent. Our last Sunday in preparation for our celebration of the birth of Jesus at Bethlehem. Today is a very important piece in the preparation process: preparing for the coming of the Christ, the Promised One, the Saviour. For the last two weeks, we have heard stories about John the Baptist, who introduced Jesus to the public. John called for the people to get ready for the healing ministry of Jesus. Today, we hear more about two important persons in the drama that is unfolding: King David and Mary.

Usually the first reading is chosen to help us hear the Gospel passage. It suggests what we are to reflect upon, and how we are to interpret the Gospel passage. The first reading today tells us about David. Never in his life had David experienced failure. When he was still young, he defeated Goliath, the Giant. He conquered the Philistines, the fierce enemies of the Hebrews. He won the loyalty of the Northern Israelites who didn't trust anyone. He got extraordinary loyalty from his soldiers and conquered Jerusalem, which had for over 200 years never been captured. Now he wanted to build a temple for God. Today the prophet says to David, "do whatever you want." Then he came back the next day to tell David that God had said no. No one had ever said no to David in his life. God had lived in a tent ever since the Israelites had been led out of Egypt. A tent was the normal dwelling place for desert people. It was the best way for God to dwell among his people, to direct them in their wandering, and to move along with them each stage of their journey. The tent symbolized the security of God's presence. No matter where they would have migrated, God was with them. Yet nothing is more insecure than a tent. It could collapse any moment, unlike a temple on rock. David abandoned his dream of building a temple for God.

At the same time, God did something surprising. He had chosen David to be king, and promised he would head up a dynasty. For the first time in the history of the Chosen people, the position of king would be hereditary, "Your house and your kingdom shall be made sure forever before me; your throne, David, shall be established forever." The story of the Annunciation is another example that illustrates what God wants is not always what is expected. He sent His angel to a young unwed woman to tell her that she would be the mother of the Chosen One. God continues to surprise his followers. It would not be a temple that David would build, but a dynasty, and from that dynasty, the Messiah would come. It would not be as intervention of the Spirit that God's plan would be pushed forward. As it was true in the time of King David, and in the time of Mary, so would it be true throughout history. It is true in our day as well. It is always in unexpected ways that God acts. God's plan is almost always to be present and active in the most surprising ways. Often the plan of God is baffling and mysterious to us, and that is where we learn from Mary. God's plan is made known and cooperation is asked. Though the future is often dim and unclear, it is by being open to the plan of God that we can best prepare for the birth of Jesus among us. We have heard the story of how Mary said yes to God's invitation. She could not have ever realized the implications. She could not have known that she would have a child in a stable. She could not have known that she would be a refugee in a foreign country. She could not have known that 33 years later she would watch her son die as a criminal. Mary did not say yes just once. She had to renew that yes many times. Because she relied on the goodness of God, she was able to remain faithful. Each of us has made commitments and undertaken obligations. When we say yes, we do not realize the full implications either. The full realization is only revealed as we go along the path opened to us. We, too, have to reaffirm our original yes to be faithful, not once, but often. We have to ask God for help to remain faithful. By following the same path, Mary brought Christ to birth. He will be brought to birth in each of us too.

Mary imagined, but it would be through the miraculous
