1ST SUNDAY OF LENT

Excerpt from a homily by Fr. Carl Kelly, OMI

Lent is the season to prepare for the full celebration of the central event of our redemption story: the suffering, death and resurrection of Jesus. The first reading today goes way back to a period before recorded history began. We have the story of Noah and the flood. After Noah's ark came to rest, as the first reading said: "God said to Noah and his sons, 'As for me, I am establishing my covenant with you and your descendants after you, and with every living creature that is with you...I establish my covenant with you, that never again shall all flesh be cut off by the waters of a flood...'" God binds himself to remember the contract he has made, and the rainbow was to be a sign. There is a deeper message here. It is God's love for people, expressed concretely in a sign they would know. Here is the story of one man's family long ago and far away, but it might just as easily be now and be your family. Noah is memorable because he was a man of faith, and because God made a covenant with him. Noah represents God's wanting to give humans another chance.

In the second reading, St. Peter sees even more in this story. The waters of the flood are, for him, a foreshadowing of baptism, "Baptism, which this prefigures, now saves you, not as a removal of dirt from the body, but as an appeal to God for a good conscience through the resurrection of Jesus Christ..." As God brought Noah and his family out of the waters of the flood, so God has brought us from death to life through the waters of Baptism. It is good to remember our Baptism, to feel the water again, to know once more what Christ did for us through those life-giving waters.

The Church gives us these two readings: the story about Noah and God's covenant and the statement by Peter to remind us that, on Easter, we will all stand together before the altar and renew our baptismal promises. Lent is for getting in shape to do that. Lent is for living up to our baptism, Lent is for shaping up, by prayer, fasting and almsgiving for the race we are in. With those two readings preparing the way, we hear again the story of Jesus' experience in the desert, a place where there is danger, where there are encounters with Satan. That is where Jesus goes, and stays for forty days. Mark says: "He was tempted by Satan, he was with wild beasts, and the angels waited on him." The desert or the wilderness is used by Mark to signify a place that was opposite to the mountain. The mountain was where one encountered God. That was where Moses received the Ten Commandments. That was where Jesus was transfigured. The mountain was a place to meet God. The wilderness was where one met evil. The desert was the place where one encountered the dark side, the sinful side of mankind. If the mountain was a good place to be, then the desert was a bad place to be. It was a place of hunger and thirst, and suffering, a place of danger, a place where evil lurked, and was the place where one encountered serious temptations. Mark tells us: "After Jesus was baptized, the Spirit drove him out into the wilderness." At his baptism, Jesus had the experience of knowing that he was the Son of God, he was the beloved, and God's favour rested with him. And the Spirit of God which appeared at his baptism, now drove him into the desert, to this dangerous place where he would be tested and tried, and where he would be ministered to by angels. This is the image that the Gospel gives us today. Mark in his Gospel does not tell us anything about the temptations. He does not have to. He states that Jesus was in the desert. It was not to be an experience of God's presence, but rather a place where the absence of God would be felt, and where Jesus would be in full solidarity with the people he came to lead back to God.

The readings today tell us that Lent is a time during which we recall the loving covenant God made with Noah and us, and we recall the promises made at our baptism. We are invited to join Jesus in the desert, where we get to know our own sinfulness, to know the absence of God, so that we, too, can be ready to hear the message that Jesus delivered to Galilee: "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God has come near: repent and believe in the Good News."

VOCATION REFLECTION

"Into the Wilderness" by Jarek Pachocki, OMI

"We might not be able to literally travel to the desert as Jesus did, but we can all create a desert space in our overcrowded lives. We can set aside a place and time to be alone daily with God, a time to distance ourselves from the many noises and voices that bombard our lives every day, a time to hear God's word, a time to rediscover who we are before God, a time to say, "yes" to God and, "no" to Satan as Jesus did. Welcome to Lent! Welcome to the desert!"

"Lent is not about penance. Lent is about becoming, doing and changing whatever it is that is blocking the fullness of life in us right now."
